Consulting continues to rank among the most popular profession for emerging MBAs and graduates, and for good reason. The consulting industry has seen revenues grow about 16 percent per year. Consulting is one of the best-paid professions for recent grads, offering new graduates lucrative salary packages and the chance to run shoulders with the top management of Fortune 500 companies, while working on some of the most interesting issues that these managers face. At first glance, it looks like a no-brainer.

But don't be hasty. Consulting has much to recommend, but it's no walk in the park. Presures are high, travel is onerous, and the interview process can be painful. Before setting off down the consulting route, you should develop a good understanding of where the industry is going, what is the role, and how closely it fits with your needs and personality.

Vault.com Career Guide to Consulting, 2000 edition aims to give you the tools and information to make an informed judgement-not only so that you can make a credible impression in the interview, but so that you are making the right decision for your future. Discover if consulting is for you with our handing checklist. Learn about what consultants really do on the job, from start date to completion. This guide contains the most up-to-date, accurate information on consulting firms available today.
