The Trouble with Tradition: Native Title and Cultural Change Simon Young Sol

The Trouble with Tradition is a broad and detailed examination of the native title jurisprudence across four countries--the US, Canada, New Zealand and Australia--with a specific focus on the handling of Indigenous community change in each country. The book demonstrates that there is a notable receptivity to Indigenous change. It argues that the prevailing Australian methodology, however, suffers from many technical problems and will have grievous consequences for Indigenous Australians. The Australian courts, in their preoccupation with Indigenous tradition, have gradually cultivated two related excesses: over-specificity in the definition of the aboriginal interest and over-particularity in the search for cultural constancy and continuity. These digressions threaten to entrench an unjustifiable attenuation of the native title interest and an inherent intolerance of Indigenous change.
