Possum Cops, Poachers and the Counterfeit Game Warden Susan Lindsley

The afternoon shotgun pellets plummeted the leaves around her on her own hunting grounds. Susan Lindsley did not run and hide. She took off after the poacher. Only one of many she pursued.

He did not come back. Neither did any others of those she caught and jailed.

Even Susan herself could not try to outrun the law. When she accidentally killed a doe out of season, she called the local possum cop on herself. And the word began to circulate in her community: "If you poach on Susan Lindsley and survive, you will go to jail."

She went from "I don't want to hunt" to an avid deer hunter, an expert tracker, a teacher for her friends, and a ferocious activist for game management. She writes as she lived those years: With a heart for animals, an enthusiasm for the outdoors and a love of painting pictures with words.
