This lesson on Comfort Measures for the Terminally Ill includes a complete training packet. Each in-service packet takes approximately one hour to complete and fully meets the Medicare in-service training requirements. As aides need training, you can make as many copies as you want - there s no restriction when used with aides assigned from your office location. Remember that Home Health Aides must have 12 hours of in-service training every year. LESSON OBJECTIVES Upon completion of this program, the home health aide will be able to: Identify three common symptoms that occur during the dying process Explain three strategies that provide pain relief, and Describe comfort measures for shortness of breath and dry mouth OVERVIEW The end-of-life is often associated with suffering among dying individuals. Studies have shown that as many as 50 percent of dying persons with cancer or other chronic illnesses experience unrelieved symptoms during their final days. Although death itself is not preventable, comfort measures provided to the terminally ill can limit these symptoms. Two major programs that focus on comfort care for the terminally ill are palliative care and hospice care. These programs provide services that focus on relieving uncomfortable symptoms caused by the dying process. Not all terminally ill patients choose palliative or hospice care. Some continue to seek a cure and remain in homecare. These patients can still benefit from many of the comfort measures identified in this lesson as the major focus of care for the terminally ill patient is comfort care, regardless of whether they are receiving services from palliative, hospice, or homecare programs.
