Minding the Bedside- Nursing from the Heart of the Awakened Mind Jerome Stone

Who are you when you show up at your patient's bedside? Where is your mind? Are you fully present and focused on the person in front of you, or are your thoughts elsewhere, mired in the myriad day-to-day distractions we all face?

A distracted mind is common, and it results in our patients not getting from us what they need and deserve most and what we are inherently capable of providing: an attentive and compassionate presence based on a mind that is undistracted.

When we as caregivers approach our patients with a presence based upon mindfulness, awareness, and compassion, that presence helps our patients to find peace within their own mind and confidence in us as their caretakers.

In discussions on meditation, work environment, and mind-body research, and by presenting techniques on thoughts and feelings, this book is a guide to changing how we work with our mind to become a more focused and compassionate human being, freeing ourselves to become present in ways we've never known!
